

CONTENT STRATEGIST & COPYWRITER

Words that make people act.

From founder narratives to email sequences that convert.

I write content that earns trust before it asks for anything. Across email marketing, LinkedIn storytelling, brand narratives, and SEO — my work is built on one belief: the right story, told well, does more than any ad ever could.

Six ways I make your content work harder

I specialise in writing that builds authority over time — the kind that earns a reader's trust before it asks for anything in return.

01 — Email Marketing

Sequences That Sell Without Selling

Story-first emails under 300 words. Curiosity-led subject lines. Tight CTAs. Designed for founders, ghostwriting studios, and service businesses.

02 — Founder Narratives

The Story Behind the Brand

Ghost-written LinkedIn stories for founders across blockchain, education, wellness, and publishing. Your voice, your story, my words.

03 — SEO Blog Writing

6,000–10,000 Word Authority Pieces

Full 8-step SEO process: intent mapping, competitor gap analysis, rich results targeting, and dual CTAs. Ranked content that reads like editorial.

04 — LinkedIn Content

Posts That Start Conversations

Viral-format storytelling, thought leadership posts, and ghostwritten content for executives.

05 — Brand & Website Copy

Voice, Positioning, Messaging

Full website copy, niche landing pages, service descriptions, and FAQs. Built around the reader's specific fear or desire.

06 — Brand Stories

Emotional Storytelling for B2B & B2C

Founder stories, company origin narratives, case studies, and testimonial-led content. Built for brands that lead with trust.

EMAIL MARKETING

Emails that earn the click

All written for Rolling Authors® — a book ghostwriting studio serving founders and executives. Every email opens with story, closes with CTA, and stays under 300 words.

We had three clients approach us this month, all with the same goal: a book on leadership. Same topic. Very different outcomes.

Client 1 said: "I have 15 years of consulting experience." There are thousands of consultants with that. Client 2 said: "My audience is anyone in a leadership role." That's not an audience — that's everyone. Client 3 said: "I'm writing for first-generation immigrant founders in India who've never had a leadership mentor. I've built three companies. I have frameworks that don't exist in mainstream leadership books."

Client 3 knew the secret: leadership is a category, not a book idea. What wins is specificity, lived experience, and an underserved audience.

STRATEGY NOTE

Three-way contrast structure. Teaches the reader the rule (specificity wins) through story — then positions Rolling Authors as the team that can extract that specificity from you.

AUTHORITY BUILDING · ROLLING AUTHORS®

"Will a manuscript from an outside team ever match Penguin Random House quality?"

It's the question every founder-author quietly wonders. And the honest answer: yes — but only if the process was built to those standards from day one.

At Rolling Authors, every manuscript goes through structural development stages that mirror how traditional publishers work: concept definition, chapter architecture, tone planning, line-by-line refinement. Our editors come from the publishing industry. They know what a manuscript needs to pass the Page 5 test.

We also study bestselling titles in your specific category — same structure, tone, depth, and chapter style — while keeping your voice intact. The result isn't outsourced. It reads like a publisher's product.

Reply with "interested" and we'll walk you through how the process would work for your book.

STRATEGY NOTE

CASE STUDY · ROLLING AUTHORS®

"Why this physician got a ₹5 lakh contract while others were turned down"

A cardiologist applied for a ₹5L/year corporate wellness contract alongside dozens of other physicians. Same credentials. Same experience. Similar pricing.

One person walked away with the contract. The difference: she had written and published a book on Workplace Health and Preventive Cardiology — the exact criteria the company was evaluating on.

The HR Director said it plainly: "A book demonstrates commitment that a résumé cannot. Writing one validates that you have the structured knowledge to back your claimed expertise."

By the time the selection meeting happened, decision-makers had already read 200+ pages of her thinking. There were no doubts left to clear.

The data is consistent: 67% of doctors who publish see more corporate inquiries. Fees rise 35–50% on average. Speaking engagements triple within 12 months.

STRATEGY NOTE

Data-backed case study framed as a story. Targets physicians and professionals who sell expertise. ROI framed in real rupees — not vague promises. Makes the reader do the math themselves.

INDUSTRY POSITIONING · ROLLING AUTHORS®

"AI can now draft book-length manuscripts. Publishers are tightening the rules."

Generative AI can now produce book-length drafts fast. In response, more than 70 guidelines to explicitly reject AI-produced content.

What this means: publishers, agents, and readers are looking for manuscripts with a recognisable human voice — and the legal climate is shifting to enforce it.

At Rolling Authors, we don't just produce pages. We develop books — from the idea, to structure, to style, to a manuscript written with care and strategic intent. The all-human way.

If you're working on a memoir, non-fiction, or an idea that deserves to last — reply with your concept. We'd love to talk.

STRATEGY NOTE

Uses an industry news hook to position Rolling Authors on the right side of a debate their audience already cares about. Differentiates from AI-first competitors without directly attacking them.

EDUCATIONAL / STORYTELLING CRAFT • ROLLING AUTHORS®

"Don't write like your mom is watching. Ana Huang didn't."

Ana Huang didn't become a BookTok phenomenon because she writes steamy scenes. She became one because she understands timing, subtext, and flaws that are also features.

In Twisted Love, the story doesn't start when Alex and Ava first meet — it starts when their carefully built walls are about to come down. That's Huang's real skill: she knows that timing is a function of emotional readiness, not plot mechanics.

Her characters rarely say what they mean. Alex's "You're not my type" is a lie — and we know it. The real conversation lives beneath the dialogue. She gives her characters flaws grounded in trauma, making those flaws feel relatable rather than annoying.

The lesson isn't about romance. It's about making your characters feel real enough to root for — and brave enough to be honest about what they want.

STRATEGY NOTE

Pop culture hook for a serious craft lesson. Written for author-facing audiences to position Rolling Authors as a creative partner, not just a service vendor. Builds authority through education.

EDUCATIONAL · ROLLING AUTHORS®

"Your brain isn't blocked. It's just being dramatic."

Let's talk about writer's block. More specifically — why it isn't real.

Most of the time, the "block" is fear in disguise. Fear of writing badly. Fear of being judged. Fear of not doing justice to your story. Your mind isn't blank — it's cluttered.

Sometimes it's overthinking the first draft (your job is to write it all, not write it right). Sometimes it's fatigue, not a lack of talent. Sometimes you've lost track of why you started. And sometimes, creativity just needs a different chair.

The block isn't the problem. The conditions aren't right yet. Don't wait for inspiration — create the conditions for it to arrive.

And if you've been stuck too long? That's what a good editor or ghostwriter is for.

STRATEGY NOTE

Reframes a common pain point with a confident, slightly bold opening. Five distinct "actual reasons" keep it scannable. Soft CTA at the end positions the Rolling Authors team as the solution without hard-selling.

FOUNDER NARRATIVES — GHOST-WRITTEN FOR LINKEDIN

Real people. Real stakes. Human words.

These are ghost-written first-person stories for founders, entrepreneurs, and creators — published under their name on LinkedIn and their company platforms. Each captures a distinct voice, industry, and emotional arc.

Lauren — Samavira

MEDITATION & TRAUMA RECOVERY · GLOBAL

My life didn't start with tranquillity. It started with suffering. A psychiatrist once told me I'd be on antidepressants for the rest of my life. But something deep inside me whispered: there must be another way. That whisper grew into a mission. And that mission became Samavira — peace of mind, courage. Two parts of me I thought were lost.

Gabriel Covington

WRISTKEY GLOBAL SOLUTIONS · BLOCKCHAIN

I grew up in the inner city, where aspirations came after survival. I had no investors, no mentors, no startup incubator. Just open-source tutorials and a vision that wouldn't let me quit. Blockchain was my freedom. My education. My escape. WristKey became real without venture capital — built through hard work, code, and belief.

Veronika Kim — Balansize

WOMEN'S WELLNESS APP · DUBAI / HERIOT-WATT

When I became a mother, everything changed. My balance disappeared. I didn't know what postpartum issues were, and online resources only added confusion. This confusion led to Balansize — because women don't need generic wellness apps. They need a companion who understands each stage of life with compassion and intelligence.

Brian Hoonjong Paik

I was a salaryman in South Korea, doing everything right but still feeling trapped. I joined a major crypto exchange, chased altcoins, won and lost. Then I realised: if you're not the house, you're the prey. I read The Internet of Money. I took the orange pill. For a short time, I could have been a token millionaire. I chose to be a Bitcoiner for life.

Bernardita Sanchez Vieyra

EDBINDER • EDTECH • NEW YORK / LATIN AMERICA

I didn't come up with this idea in a corporate meeting room. I came up with it in a school — watching Latin American educators work long hours for minimal pay while U.S. schools struggled to fill classrooms. In 2021, Ismael and I decided to stop talking about the problem. We built a platform that connects both worlds — and placed 150+ teachers across 8 U.S. states.

Prknack Agency

SPORTS & LUXURY PR • INDIA

I didn't plan on being in PR. In 2020, I got my first assignment with one of India's best designers — no experience, no mentors, just instinct. By 2021 we were doing international projects. A documentary on Sakshi Malik won gold at the New York Film Festival. Babita Phogat in an Asian Paints commercial. Sangeeta Phogat on Jhalak Dikhhla Jaa for 12 weeks. This is Prknack.

Going viral isn't an accident. It's skilled strategy, real stories, and maybe the hand of a writer who knows when to get out of the way."

The Power of "Once More"

Walt Disney was fired because his editor thought he "lacked imagination." Colonel Sanders knocked on 1,009 doors before someone said yes to KFC. J.K. Rowling got 12 rejections before Harry Potter found a publisher.

The point where most salespeople fail: they stop after the first no.

If the client ghosts, they move on. If the first two emails go unanswered, there's never a third. But the great ones say — once more.

Before you close your laptop today: can you push just once more?

The Venture Capital Journey — Kansaltancy Ventures

In 2016, I sat at my desk wondering if I'd made the biggest mistake of my life. We had just launched Kansaltancy Ventures. Most people didn't understand venture capital. Angel investing was barely a concept in India. There were 436 registered startups under "Startup India." No Shark Tank. No LinkedIn influencers analysing pitch decks.

We weren't just building a company. We were trying to ignite an ecosystem that didn't exist.

2020 hit. Our founder network lost 40% of their businesses. But we stayed close to the fire. We listened. We adapted. And something incredible happened — we grew. All-time high VC transactions. Bets on critical businesses that yielded extraordinary returns.

Publishing Scam Alert: How Aspiring Authors Are Losing Thousands

"Great news! Your manuscript is wonderful. We are thrilled to publish it."

That email was the turning point in Ravi's life. He'd spent years rewriting his book. Countless cups of chai. Then a "well-known" publishing house offered to publish it — with a ₹50,000 processing fee. Standard, they said.

The editing was full of errors. The cover looked like a free app template. The marketing was two social media posts. The bookstores they promised? Gone. So was his ₹50,000.

Ravi isn't alone. Thousands of aspiring authors fall into this every year. Do your due diligence. Get professional guidance before you pay anyone a rupee.

LinkedIn Content

This is the content era. Having a great idea is no longer enough — it has to become a post that starts conversations, builds communities, and drives real engagement.

Step 1: Clarify the core message — not just the topic, but the specific angle that speaks to a specific person.

Step 2: Capture the voice — a ghostwriter who writes generically has missed the point entirely.

Step 3: Structure for story — every post has a purpose: curiosity, value, or action.

Step 4: Trigger the algorithm — timing, length, and engagement hooks matter.

Step 5: Analyse and evolve — what worked, what didn't, and why.

BRAND STORYTELLING

Brands that feel like people

From a Kolkata home kitchen to a PR agency in the heart of India's sports world — here's what brand storytelling looks like when it's built from truth.

BRAND STORY B2C FOOD EMOTIONAL NARRATIVE

From a Home Kitchen to a Distinguished Company: Lemon Krust

The story of Jyoti Kariwala — who never intended to build an empire. She just loved baking.

she enrolled in the Goldman Sachs 10,000 Women program at IIM Bangalore, alongside women with MBAs. She brought cake samples.

And she came out with clarity.

Then the pandemic hit. While everyone else sat still, Lemon Krust delivered — fresh bread, homemade cakes, drop-offs at apartments. Some started calling her "Ma Annapurna." Not because she was selling food. Because she was serving comfort. Not a single employee was laid off. The business tripled.
